My Favourite Story (including the book and the cartoon movie)

The story is about heroic adventures of Quasimodo. He is a gentle and passionate bell ringer of Notre Dam, a famous city in Europe. With the urge inside him, he disobeys his evil master and leaves the Tower to the joyous Festival of Foods in the city streets below. But when the people turn on him because of the way he looks, he is received by a beautiful gypsy girl, named Esmeralda. However, Quasimodo finds himself struggling in two battles: to save the city he loves from destruction and to compel others who judge people just by their outlooks. Now, may I leave the ending of the story open for you to find out?

The reason I liked reading it.....

This is a thrilling, heartwarming tale, full of unbelievable but hilarious. It is filled with charming and suspense elements. It is a joy to read and a wonder to behold all the heroic deeds you will see in this story..

What character in the book would I wish to be? Why?

I often look at myself as Quasimodo, the hunchback bell ringer. I share the same feelings as his when people judge my capability by my age and / or my physical handicaps. I think only a few smart supervisors would understand their own men. That's what make them leaders of their trades.
