

Secondary Students' Problem In Hong Kong

4D Jenny Chan

Dear Mr. Wong,

I am writing to express my opinion about the problems which occur in secondary schools in Hong Kong.

Nowadays, students may have a lot of personal problems that cannot be solved easily especially when they have no one to talk to. Students will be under great pressure if they cannot find a way to tackle their problems. Peer pressure from classmates could also deeply affect a student. From my experience, many students are jealous of students who have excellent academic performance. They may think they are losers and always compare themselves with the winner.

Moreover, there is too much homework. Students not only have to cope with the pressure of examinations and tests, they also have to face another source of pressure—tons and tons of homework every day. It is a difficult job for them to do so much homework every day. If they do not hand in their homework on time, they will be punished by their teachers. The pressure is unbearable.

To sum up, there are many problems among the students. Sometimes they do not know how to solve them. As a result I think the government should help our students immediately.

Yours sincerely,
Jenny Chan

Teacher's Feedback: Very fluent and able to express the ideas and the personal feeling clearly. However, I think it is better to include more examples. (Mr. Lai Kam Chuen)

Food For Thought: Stress is everywhere in a fast changing society like Hong Kong, but we can look at it from a relatively positive point of view by regarding it as a drive for excellence.
