

A Fairy Tale

3A Yoyo Wong

I was a beautiful swan dancing to an exquisite melody. The lake was pink, and I tried to drink the pink water from the lake. I swam up to the land, and there were many flowers on it, like lilies and roses. All the flowers gave me a smile.

I spread my wings and flew. I saw a castle, so I stopped. There was a princess who was elegant and wearing a wedding gown in the castle. She said to her servant, "The fairy tale life isn't for me. I don't want to be like a canary, living in a cage and waiting for someone to set me free." The princess looked out of the window and saw me. She said to me, "Come! I think you can help me. Be the bride." She touched my head, and I changed into the princess. Her servant then put her wedding gown on me.

I had waited for a long time at the princess' room. When the sky became dark, I heard that exquisite melody again.

When I was looking out of the window, someone held me at my back. The prince? At that moment, I felt that he was the guy I had been waiting for all my life. He took my hand and it was like taking my whole life too.

"Wow, the stars are shining so brightly. Have you ever seen such a beautiful night?" I said. He looked at my eyes and said, "I'm a fool because I can't help falling in love with you."

I woke up at that time. I remained a swan and all around me was darkness. I could see nothing. Oh, what an unforgettable moment!

Teacher's Feedback : A very romantic story! (Miss Louisa Chan)

Food For Thought : Do you want to be the princess or the beautiful swan?
