

A Scary Story

2B Daisy Shum

Joe was having a bad day at the office. After his interview with a man about a car accident, he was trying to finish writing a report for the next day's newspaper. He worked late and was very sleepy. At five to twelve, Joe finally finished his work and decided to go home.

Just before midnight, Joe left the office to go home. He drove back home but he found that the road was very quiet.

"Why are there no other cars on the road?" Joe said to himself.

While Joe was driving, he saw a girl covered in blood sitting on the pavement, Joe stopped driving and got out. He approached the girl. Joe found that there was a scar on the girl's forehead and there were bloodstains on her white dress. Joe pulled his car over.

"Hi, lady! Can I help you?" Joe asked.

Later, Joe helped the girl to go in to his car.

"Are you alright?" Joe asked.

Joe then drove the girl to hospital.

On the way to the hospital, the girl suddenly leaned over Joe. Joe looked into the rear-view mirror and was scared. The girl's face was pale, her eyes were glowing and she had a pair of sharp fangs.

Joe braked. He abandoned his car and ran away. Joe went back home and he was scared. He worried about his car and called the police.

"Sir, my car is now on Nathan Road because there was an accident. Can you go there to investigate and tow my car back to my home? My home is on Jordan Road. You just turn left on Nathan Road and go forward 10 meters. I will wait for you there."

Later, the police drove Joe's car back to his home. Joe was happy to see the police. He stepped forward.

"Sir, have you seen the girl who is wearing a white dress with a lot of bloodstains on it?" asked Joe.

"No," the policeman replied.

After the police left, Joe found a bracelet on his car which he thought was left by the girl. Joe looked at the bracelet carefully and he found that it belonged to his dead sister.

"Oh, my dear sister!" Joe cried.

Joe thought that it might be his dead sister who missed him and wanted to see him.

Teacher's Feedback : Well done! It is an exciting story. You have included a very detailed ending for the story and the ending is unexpected. Besides, I appreciate the effort that you have made. (Miss Chan Lai Yee)
